The West Corridor

Dedication

Because she has guided us with wisdom and kindness throughout our school years, and because she has been the major reason for whatever success we may have had, the class of 1941 dedicates this issue of "The Huttlestonian" to Miss Edith Rogers, our faculty advisor and friend.

Edith Rogers

Appreciation

We, the class of 1941, do hereby set aside this page in our year book in recognition of all the work Miss Mabel G. Hoyle has done for us. We wish to show our appreciation for the amount of time and energy so graciously expended on us; to thank her for her interest in our class, and for her part in making our school years successful.

The Class History

On a fair September morning — '37 was the year,
A group of frightened Freshmen
Entered halls of marble here.
Fairhaven High School's grand old building
Seemed most foreign, large, and drear.

After several weeks of hunting,
Rooms were found and spirits rose;
And anon the class assembled
And their officers they chose.

First a president was selected—
A maid most fair and sweet,
Ruth Patasini was her name,
Studious, competent, neat.

Claire Duval was vice president,
And Barbara Fassett scribe;
Irene Fitzgerald was treasurer;
And these four did rule the tribe.

They studied long and worked so hard
Some pleasure was their due;
So a dance was held for the freshman class
And most exclusive too.

Some tripped the light fantastic—
Some sat and watched it all;
All had their fun at games and stunts,
'Twas really quite a ball.

Not always is there pleasure,
Not always play and fun;
The loss of their dear principal
Saddened everyone.

Mr. Dickey was a friend to all
His aid and counsel true,
His students will remember him,
And honor his memory, too.

Now vacation was upon them,
The time did quickly pass
And when the fall was here again,
They became the Sophomore Class.

During the summer, the school committee
Had selected with one voice,
Our principal, Mr. Downing,
An exceedingly wise choice.

Again, fair Ruth to be their head,
Carleton Trull was next in line,
Claire Duval was the secretary;
Bob Whiting cared for gold in their mine.

Now great destruction was upon us;
Rain descended, and high winds blew;
Water covered all the earth,
And destroyed much property, too.

School was closed for a few days,
They rested from their labors,
And tried to help in many ways,
Their far less fortunate neighbors.

Soon lessons were as always,
They tried to learn, not guess;
One pause from routine duties,
A sophomore dance, no less.

Again the year's work ended,
Again they left their books
And home their ways they wended;
With not many backward looks.

September found them ready
For a new year of study, true;
They met as Jolly Juniors,
Ambitious, but frolicsome, too.

Once more Ruth was selected
Their President to be;
Carlton Trull was their vice-president,
Eleanor Cyr, their secretary.

Courtney Patasini was elected;
Their treasurer was he;
And Eleanor Bourque, with highest honors,
Headed the Honor Society.

The great event of their Junior year,
The Junior Prom — how the time did pass;
And on a throne in Neptune's court
Ruth Patasini was crowned queen by the class.

An urge for drama struck them
And they did present a play.
Carlton Trull as Bashful Bob
Stole many fair hearts away.

On Junior Day the Seniors chose
With hard work — rehearsals and such;
To give a play for the Juniors;
And they applauded, oh, so much.

To return the compliment
And be most kind and fair,
The seniors were asked to Junior Dance.
And many were seen there.

Perhaps it would be wise to state,
(Other classes may feel the same,)
Unselfishness in sharing fun
Is really half the game.

Well, their Junior year was over;
They departed to their homes;
One last year left in High School,
To con their books and tomes.

Another September morning,
They entered the halls so dear.
Room 7 and Mr. Lawton beckoned;
They're Seniors now, never fear.

Again they selected their leaders;
For the fourth time in line
Ruth Patasini was president,
David Blaha vice-president this time.

Cal Hayward was their secretary,
And Claire Duval treasurer, too;
And so the days did roll along
With ever so much to do.

Again this class did woo the muse;
A play they did present.
'Twas called "A Howling Success",
A title very well meant.

After the play, the Senior Prom,
Their last gala event;
The class enjoyed each moment
In dancing and pleasure spent.

Now came the culmination
Of days and months and years;
These seniors received their diplomas
And parted mid smiles and tears.

Farewells were said to classmates;
Farewells to teachers, too;
One last look round the classrooms—
High school days were through.

The Class Will

The Last Will and Testament of the class of '41

We, of the Fairhaven High School, County of Bristol, and State of Massachusetts, being of legal age, sound mind, and memory, do make, publish, and declare this our last will and testament, hereby revoking and annulling any and all Will or Wills by us made heretofore:

Item 1

Dick Stetson leaves his Christmas present from "da boys" to Mr. Wood to aid him in his future experiments.

Item 2

Courtney Gifford donates his length to Tom Carey.

Item 3

Barbara Kanter wills her jokes to Wanda Cornell.

Item 4

Delbert Hirst bequeaths his bass viol to Professor Adams; he also leaves him a stepladder.

Item 5

Milton Gonsalves leaves his ability as a lover to Clark Wilbor.

Item 6

Courtney Patasini makes a gift of his way with the women to Roy Ingham.

Item 7

Phyl Sullivan bestows her annual sunburn on any pale-faced Junior who wants one.

Item 8

Ruth Patasini wills the offices she has held to fifteen or twenty under-graduates who might be able to fill them.

Item 9

Donald Farwell leaves his ability as teacher's pet to Dennis Mahoney.

Item 10

Nancy Church bestows her goggles to anyone with enough nerve to wear them.

Item 11

Don Kearns leaves his brains to be divided among all those who need them.

Item 12

Sonny Gibbons relinquishes his set of traffic violations to Stillman Bushnell.

Item 13

Ellen Hayes leaves her fingernails to Audrey Wallner.

Item 14

Ursula Fuller wills her height to Lillian Delano.

Item 15

Elizabeth Dexter leaves her broken chair in the library to any unsuspecting Junior.

Item 16

Cal and Sally bequeath one seat to Cynthia and Bill.

Item 17

Rusty Chase presents a Social Science book to Mr. Robinson.

Item 18

Ann Stetson leaves her classroom voice to Earl Fisher.

Item 19

Charlie Knowlton gives the Juniors Room 7, but only if they promise to keep it clean!

Item 20

Pinkey Jones leaves a book entitled "How to Relax and Enjoy It" to any enterprising and ambitious Junior who likes to read.

Item 21

Elsie Roberts wills her giggle to Nat Kerwin.

Item 22

Miss Rogers, with a sigh of relief, leaves her claims on the play, the prom, and graduation to Miss Kussman.

Item 23

The class presents Mr. Lawton with a microphone, which we feel sure he will need in his dealings with the Juniors.

Item 24

We also leave the Coach a high speed elevator for the daily climb from his office to Room 18.

Item 25

As a class we leave Miss Hoyle all the patience we can spare for her next Senior Play.

Item 26

We leave our thanks to Miss Siebert for this fine yearbook and the work she has done to make it possible.

Item 27

Seriously, we wish the Juniors success in all their financial undertakings.

Item 28

We leave the Juniors our place in the hearts of our faculty.

Item 29

For ourselves, our teachers, and our associates we wish wisdom, health, and happiness.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand to this, the last Will and Testament of the Senior Class of '41 this day, the 13th of March, A. D. 1941.

April 10—

John Hines of Dedham gave readings from Clarence Day's "Life With Father" at an assembly.

A Pan-American assembly was sponsored by the members of the Sophomore Class under the direction of Miss Katherine Chaffee. Those taking part were David Cargill, Marion Booth, Alexander Clement, Jr., Lois Swift, Walter Jura, Evelyn Afthemeades, and Alan Dunham.

April 17—

Mr. Downing announced that school session would close a week early this year, and that graduation would be held June 18.

April 24—

Mr. Hans Helms, who has been on the Robert Ripley program, entertained the student body with vocal interpretations of violin and trumpet solos.

May 29—

"One Who Came to Gettysburg", a play written by Robert Knipe, was presented at an assembly, and also was selected for a later performance, as a part of the graduation program. Those taking part were: Robert Knipe, Edward Lowrie, Donald Farwell, Donald Kearns, Arthur Tripp, Donald Jason, Evelyn Teixeira, Eleanor Bourque, Elsie Roberts, Mary Dickey, and Phyllis Sullivan. The play was under the direction of Miss Hoyle, and Irene Laronda was prompter.

Junior Day was held June 13. Earle Fisher and Albert Silva were the Juniors appointed to participate, and Richard Stetson, Donald Kearns and Walter Apperson, the Seniors.

June 18—

The Senior Banquet and Promenade was held at the New Bedford Hotel on the evening of June 18. The toastmaster was Charles Knowlton. Toasts to the faculty, the boys, the girls and the school were given respectively by Delbert Hirst, Barbara Kanter, Douglas Stevens, and Phyllis Sullivan. Mr. Downing spoke briefly. Miss Rogers, faculty advisor, was in charge of entire arrangements.

The Class Prophecy

A VERY Poor Excuse For The Prophecy Of The Class Of 1941

The reunion of the class of '41 was unique in many ways, but the most unusual thing about it was that it was held in the High School. The unprecedented and remarkable piece of diplomacy which convinced the school board that it would be altogether proper to use the school as the scene for this get-together was the work of Carlton Trull, who had since graduation, made himself famous as a tom-tom pounder.

I arrived in Fairhaven a day early so that I might have a chance again to look over the town. I was walking up Main Street, and was just about to cross Elm Avenue when a thing that looked like an over-sized beetle tore by and nearly took me off my feet. It turned out to be Charlie Knowlton and Gary Westgate trying out the super, super modern car that Knowlton had designed. In our brief talk, Westgate told me that he had fulfilled his life-long ambition. Yes, he was a trans-continental truck driver.

Remembering that this was the beginning of the tennis season, I decided to take a walk to the town tennis courts, a once popular "rendez-vous". There I found Calvin Hayward arguing with his wife, the former Sally Wilde, about something which I guessed was one of her numerous flirtations. Cal said he had started out to be a coach, but Sally had roped him, and he had had to go into the sugar business in order to support his rather large family.

Bill Benson, who had been made famous by posing as a certain comic-strip funny man for a popular cartoonist, Ed. Patnaude, was receiving a decided defeat from Ruth Patasini, a nurse who was in demand at one of our leading hospitals.

Just as I had settled down to a rather peaceful conversation, Dick Stetson, naval architect; Charlie Hammond, lady-killer; and — oh yes — Robert Whittaker Proctor nearly ripped down the fences around the courts with Proctor's newest speedster. Incidently, he had gained considerable fame as a politician, although he never had held an office.

That evening I decided to take a ride over to Providence with a casual friend of mine, Mary Dickey, who had made herself very popular by her interpretations of leading roles in the newest tragedies.

I wished to hear a piano recital given by Walter Jura. We picked up a few of our old acquaintances who were transporting themselves over the New Bedford bridge by way of the thumb. The six of them piled into the back seat of the car, and from the confused mass of legs, arms, and a few heads, they told us their life stories. "Pinky" Jones and Bill Apperson had become partners in a business venture — a distillery, I believe they said. Del Hirst told us that he played the bass fiddle in the New York Philharmonic. Dlougosinski and Dave Blaha both were playing professional football. Erwin Dexter had finally obtained a job teaching little children in the first grade, and was applying all the psychology he knew to keep the dearies disciplined.

After Jura's very excellent concert, we went back stage to see him and met many familiar people. Barbara DeCosta, now Mrs. Farwell, and her husband were there. So was Ruby Helford, who told us she reviewed all the latest fiction for THE TIMES; Phil Sullivan, popular "blues" singer on a coast to coast net work; and oddly enough, Frank King and Don Jason. These last two confided to me that, at present, they were merely gentlemen of leisure. I wondered how they ever became interested in "high-brow" music.

The next morning I decided to call on Barbara Kanter, the famous author of WHO SAID THE WOMEN ARE THE WEAKER SEX? It would seem as if I had walked in on a group of very noisy girls; I decided, at once, to remove my anatomy from the immediate vicinity. But before I did, I caught a glimpse of Florence Baker whose very pretty face had landed her in the movies. Also, from behind compacts, the faces of Marjorie and Irene Fitzgerald appeared. According to the papers, both of these girls had hooked some very rich guys as husbands. Mary LeClair was there, too, but she was buried in phonograph records and refused to say a word to anyone.

Noon. My stomach was hitting my backbone. A sign, THE HUTTLESTONIAN HOUSE, caught my eye. I ambled toward the neat little restaurant, and when I entered I was greeted by Ruth Burrell. Imagine my surprise to find that she and Marjorie Reese had opened the little place! I had a steak (which later gave me indigestion) and started to read the Fairhaven Gossiper as I ate. I was amazed to find an editorial staff consisting of the following: editor, Earl Noblet, assistant editors, John Bradley and, of all things, Courtney Patasini; business manager Russell Chase (I pitied the financial condition of the paper); and society editor, Pat Wallbank.

Who would have imagined back in '41 that such people would ever be on a newspaper! Not I.

Two news items caught my attention. The first told of Arthur Tripp's gaining the position of minister of the new Unitarian Church in dear, old Mattapoisett. The second was about Aurelia Coelho's sensational defense of some dame whose husband was suing for divorce or something.

I started to walk out of the place (I was later to regret that I ever went in there. That steak!). I didn't get far. Some thing terrible grabbed my shoulder and forced me back into the building. It was only Eleanor Cyr, the cashier. I had forgotten to pay my bill. Eleanor short changed me fifty cents, but I let it go.

That steak needed a little exercise to help the body chemicals break it up, so I started at a moderate pace toward the park. I arrived just in time to see a baseball game between the Mattapoisett Plumber Supply Co. and the Fairhaven Leaky-Seam Steamship Co. I happened to notice the Leaky-Seam team was composed entirely of Fairhaven High athletes. Quite a coincidence, what? I recognized Ralph Peets behind the plate yelling to the rest of the team which consisted of Gordon Bradley, Howard Pimental, Ed Foster, Phil Murdy, "Chinky" Morris, Merceline Luiz, Ray Trahan, and Carlton Fielding. (Incidentally, the Leaky-Seams were defeated 19-0). When I walked away, I bumped into the large bulk of Ed. Buffington, who managed the local boys.

I followed my nose and found myself in the library, where I was greeted by Thelma Cruz and Ellen Heyes, the new librarians. At the table, I saw Phyllis Gifford reading a book on applied psychology and guessed she was going to apply it to her first grade pupils. Cecile Blanchette was there, too, enjoying a book called THE POISONED GINGER ALE MURDER MYSTERY. I picked up a copy of the ATLANTIC MONTHLY and noticed an article by Marjorie Brownell entitled "Wild Life in Mattapoisett". As I glanced at it, I saw it referred to natural life, not night life. I saw John Gibbons' picture in ESQUIRE. He was modeling clothes, I think.

I crossed the street and went into the Town Hall and met several people I used to know. James Knowles and Johnny Sherman had their names on the door of the Selectman's Office. Milton Gonsalves was Tree Warden, and Noel Whiting was Chief of Police. He told me his brother Bob was on the force, too. Graft? I left the place and nearly broke up a line of Girl Scouts headed by Marion Bold and Flora Delano. Girl Scouts depress me, so I legged it away.

About five-thirty, I ran in to Theresa's Tea Shoppe, managed by Theresa Afthemeades. I saw Bob Gardner (of all people) sipping the insiped stuff, so I dashed in to say hello and chat.

Our little talk was very abruptly interrupted by a loud clamor of bells and sirens. It was nothing more than a small fire across the street; but Courtney Gifford, the fire-chief, was yelling away; and Evelyn Teixeira, the owner of the gift shop that was supposed to be burning, was screaming about some new stock that she had just put in. Betty George fainted; and Priscilla Lewis, now a nurse, came rushing up to administer first aid. I hate crowds, so I grabbed Nancy Church's arm (she, incidently, turned out to be quite a glamour girl) and beat it.

It was getting late, so I dashed back to the new Fairhaven Hotel, went up to the desk, and asked for my key. I think I haven't mentioned that the staff was composed mostly of girls of our class; oddly enough, all but the janitor, Ed. Freeman, and the house detective, Doug Stevens (imagine!) were females. The house was run by Charlotte Hathaway and Mary Lawton. A couple of very cute bellhops (not very efficient though) were Marcia Callahan and Claire Duval. As usual, there were the chamber maids that were always prying into your private business. Elizabeth Dexter, Mary Constantino, Alice Barboza, Hazel Viera, and Eileen Caswell took care of that duty. Oh yes, the doorman. I forgot him,—Dick Thatcher!

I finally arrived at the banquet. As is the custom at many reunions, every one had to tell what he had done since he had left school. I was rather surprised to find the number of girls who had become nurses. Kathlyn Banks, Barbara Fassett, Dorothy Cardoza, Jean Sutcliffe, Irene Laronda, Carmina Carmara, — all nurses. Quite a few teachers, too; Doris Richard, Ursula Fuller, Mary Durrigan, Miriam Spagnoli, Eleanor Redfern, and, of all people, Beryl Stearns. Several were secretaries and stenographers and stuff — Eleanor Bourque, Louise Prucha, Rose Gracia, Bernice Audette, Alice Botelho, and Anna Reilly.

Chester Chandler ran in during all these autobiographies. Dear Chet was all dressed up in the Postal Telegraph uniform. It seems he had to work late and couldn't get to the banquet on time.

After the gathering had quieted down, the members of the renowned Class of '41 continued to blow off their faces about their lives. You would be surprised how many girls had been married. You never thought that Virginia Lacasse, Agnes McLeod, Gladys Ward, Annette Stetson, Elsie Roberts, and Sophie Renaud would all be hitched within such a few years, did you? You'll die when you hear this (if you haven't died already): George Frederick Braley, Jr. had married, too.

At the dance after the banquet, I learned that Irene Erickson was responsible for the exhibition of oil paintings at the Boston Art Museum.

While dancing, I noticed that the orchestra, if you could call it that, was composed of a few of the musicians of our dear class. George Ferreira was playing the trumpet; William Hendricks, the piano; and Pauline Costa, the clarinet. I guessed the class didn't have as much money as it used to have. It couldn't even hire an orchestra.

There's no place like a dance to pick up pieces of gossip. I learned that Evelyn Sylvia had turned to music and was now a promising concert violinist, and that Normand Blouin had inherited a fortune from a rich uncle or something. Shirley Silver was an air hostess, and Milton Rogers graduated from an engineering college and was working to a high position in an airplane factory. When I heard that Elsie Lyman had turned out to be a physicist, my mind wandered back to the days of Mr. Wood's class in Physics. She didn't show much promise in that field then. Eleanor Layton was a girls' basketball coach, and Silvana Magardo a census taker. What a job! Linda Porte, Barbara Phillips, and Priscilla Hathaway were hairdressers. Nancy Martin had charge of the information booth in front of the High School, and Irene Stevens was personal secretary to an executive of an oil firm. Emily Bernado, Mary McDonough, Arline Pacheco, Lillian Francis, Evelyn Minezzi, Florence Lopes, Gladys Macomber, Hilda Spindola, and Gladys Thacker were all waitresses in the new Ritz Hotel in New Bedford.

The Army and Navy were represented there, too. In fact, the whole dance floor was practically covered with blue and brown spots. Ed Burt, Ed LeClaire, and Alfred Chartier were from the army. Emile Martel, Allen Sherman, Richmond Tripp, Gordon Vohnoutka, and Sumner Wilbur defended the navy cause. Oh, yes, little Walter Luiz had somehow been accepted by the Marines. I'd like to know why the doctors didn't find those stilts he wore.

With apologies to all concerned,

Donald A. Kearns, '41.

MARJORIE H. BROWNELL
Treasurer

The Fairhaven Chapter of the National Honor Society was organized in 1927. The emblem of the society is the shield, and its four points stand for Scholarship, Leadership, Character, and Service. It is the ambition of many students to be elected to membership in this organization.

The officers are: President, Eleanor Bourque; Vice-President, Alice Botelho; Secretary, Eleanor Cyr; and Treasurer, Marjorie Brownell. The other Senior members are Carmina Carmara, Chester Chandler, Thelma Cruz, Barbara DeCosta, Erwin Dexter, Donald Kearns, Evelyn Minezzi, Earl Noblet, Arline Pacheco, Ruth Patasini, Shirley Silver, Hilda Spindola, Richard Stetson, Evelyn Sylvia, Evelyn Teixeira, and Gladys Thacker.

RICHARD A. STETSON
Vice-President

PHYLLIS J. SULLIVAN
Secretary-Treasurer

Our late principal, Mr. George C. Dickey, was the founder of the Student Council which gives the student body an opportunity to take part in the school government.

In addition to its usual activities, the council has taken over the work of the Student Court and deals with traffic violators. Among its proposed projects is the printing of a Students' Handbook giving information about the school and its customs.

The council was represented by delegates at the Southeastern Massachusetts Student Council Convention at Plymouth and Rockland.

ELEANOR M. CYR

To New Bedford Woman's Club

The senior class and the faculty have chosen Ruth Patasini as the "Good Citizenship Pilgrim." This honor is given to a senior girl possessing outstanding qualities of character, personality, and patriotism. She represented our school at the state conference of the Massachusetts Daughters of the American Revolution in Boston.

The New Bedford Woman's Club started the practice, several years ago, of asking representatives from high schools to be guests at their meetings. This year Ruth Patasini and Eleanor Cyr were chosen to represent this high school.

At the meeting this year, Mrs. Albert Farnsworth, a representative to the State Legislature, spoke on the subject "Around the State House". In her talk, she told how bills were introduced, and how careful consideration was given to each issue. She showed the method used in passing a bill, and also how Women's Clubs and other organizations may help in state legislation. Refreshments were served, and our two representatives, Ruth Patasini and Eleanor Cyr, enjoyed the meeting very much.

The Cheerleaders

This year's squad of nine active girls composed and popularized three new cheers for us, and they have done much to restore more of the good, old Fairhaven school spirit. We know that they have worked hard and tirelessly and we salute them for their fine efforts.

The squad consisted of head cheerleader, Irene Fitzgerald, and Ruth Patasini, Priscilla Lewis, Ruth Byerly, Louise Benson, Janet Swift, Irene Erickson, Claire Duval and Nancy Church. They wore blue Eaton caps, blue skirts, and white sweaters. The leader, however, was dressed all in white.

Cafeteria

The Senior Play

"A Howling Success", a comedy in three acts by Robert C. Schimmel, lived up to its name in reality when a star cast from the Senior Class of 1941 presented it to a capacity audience on the night of March twenty-eighth. Under the efficient direction of Miss Mabel Hoyle, students rose to new heights in a production especially amusing and quite true to life.

Briefly, the play centers about the problem child, rampant in nearly every family. In the Pennywate family, Herbert was the problem, and Carlton Trull did some exceptionally fine work in dramatizing this part. Barbara Kanter, too, as Prunella Pennywate, showed herself the ideal sister — for one night anyway!

The ever devoted mother was well played by Elsie Roberts and the father, Lucius Pennywate, an ambitious lawyer, gave Robert Knipe, the only member of the cast not a Senior, an opportunity to display his recognized talent.

Aurelia Coelho, as Herbert's champion, Aunt Hep, provided plenty of excuse for gales of laughter from the audience, and all others taking part gave their share.

Action began when Herbert, with his trusted friend "Crusty" Ingram, enacted by Gordon Bradley, planned a robbery in order to make himself a hero in the eyes of the drawling, southern beauty, Shenandoah Marr, whose part was taken by Priscilla Lewis. And right here, Phyllis Sullivan contributed no small bit of success to this dramatic piece by her skillful acting in the characterization of Herbert's shy, lisping admirer, Joy Shook.

As Herbert makes his plans, he uncovers a similar plot by the Pennywate's maid, Marta (Evelyn Teixeira) and the gardener, Tony (Milton Gonsalves), who are trying to steal evidence from the safe concerning Lucius Pennywate's opponent for Senator in the coming election.

There is real excitement in three homes the evening that the safe is rifled. Joy and the two boys vanish, along with Marta and Tony, and everyone is looking for them — Joy's father, the police captain (Noel Whiting) as well as Joey Carter (Donald Jason), who is not on the best of terms with Herbert, but who wishes to make good in the Intelligence Service under Captain Shook.

Finally, Joy is found under a bed in the Pennywate home, but the boys are not found until late the following morning at the time Marta is captured. When Lucius Pennywate learns that Marta is actually the daughter of his opponent, he decides to withhold the evidence anyway — said evidence not having been stolen, incidently, because Herbert had opened the safe before the robbery, obtained the documents and hidden them. Herbert, it seems, had formerly had ambitions to become a locksmith and had learned the combination of the safe. He had, also, at various times, wished to become a policeman, an electrical engineer, and a boat pilot, but events had shown him his real destiny. As the curtain falls, we find him at last willing to comply with his father's wishes, and become a lawyer — another Lawyer Pennywate — and all is well.

In addition to the cast and director, credit should be given to the presentation committee, the prompter, and members of the orchestra. Everyone on the program helped make the 1941 Senior Play, "A Howling Success", long to be remembered.

Jean Campbell, '42.

The Orchestra

The Fairhaven High School Orchestra was organized by Mr. Clarence E. Jones of New Bedford in 1926. As musical interest increased, Mr. Frederick William Kempf was appointed conductor three years later. Under his direction this organization has improved considerably each year. The orchestra, which consists of forty-five members, now holds weekly rehearsals, playing for school functions, and joining with the high school chorus to present an annual concert. Qualified students from grades 10, 11, and 12 are eligible for membership in this group. It has helped immeasurably to bring credit to the name of Fairhaven High School as a school of high standing.

The Band

Fourteen years ago, the Fairhaven High School Band was organized by Mr. Clarence W. Arey. Today it is considered one of the finest in New England. Each year it has received a superior rating at the New England and State Music Festivals. These results have been achieved through the efforts of Mr. Arey, the director and Miss Elizabeth Hastings, advisor and band mother. No small credit is due, however, to the members themselves whose co-operation and service have made Fairhaven proud of them. Fine inter-school relationship between New Bedford and Fairhaven has been promoted by exchange of assembly programs, annual trips to Boston for concerts, and massed demonstrations at the "big game".

The Huttlestonian Staff

This year the editorial staff of The Huttlestonian has endeavored to present a panorama of the life of the Class of 1941 in and about the school. If, as the years go by, we live again the experiences of these carefree days, the purpose of this book and the aim of the staff will have been realized. May these pages bring to you treasured memories of weary hours of work, happy hours of play, and hours of service to the Fairhaven High School.

At Leisure

Sports

Football

A hard fighting improved football aggregation well deserved the notable increase of student backing that was shown this year.

Two new competitors, Vocational and West Springfield, were added to our schedule.

Coach Clement's first Fairhaven football team showed great superiority in playing schools of equal class; and it more than held its own against superior sized teams. New Bedford had to overcome a lot of fight before taking over the Armistice day tilt.

Following is the season's record:

Barrington	0	Fairhaven	40
Taunton	7	Fairhaven	0
Dartmouth	0	Fairhaven	21
Vocational	19	Fairhaven	0
West Springfield	0	Fairhaven	0
Attleboro	0	Fairhaven	18
Coyle	0	Fairhaven	6
New Bedford	13	Fairhaven	0

Basketball

Our basketball season started out in fair form due to the lack of veteran team material. Few experienced players returned, and Coach Clement had to break in new combinations. Proving the saying that practice makes perfect, by mid-season both the players and the scores improved. The team played with more snap and form.

The final record was not the best obtained at the high school, but due to the fact that most of our victories came in the last half of the season, no credit should be taken off for the game fighting in spite of early setbacks. The season ended with eight wins against twelve losses.

Track

It takes an individual to win one event. It takes many fellows to win a track meet. Coach Entin's team has plenty of life and spark when the urge is great.

It's this spark that pulls the team through when the competition is greatest. Our team can win with a will to succeed, and on the strength of our opening victory, Fairhaven will end the best year of athletics that has been seen in a long time.

Rounding off our major sports, it is plainly seen that the Fairhaven spirit is on the road up. This year has accomplished a great deal in promoting higher standards of support for our sports schedule.

Baseball

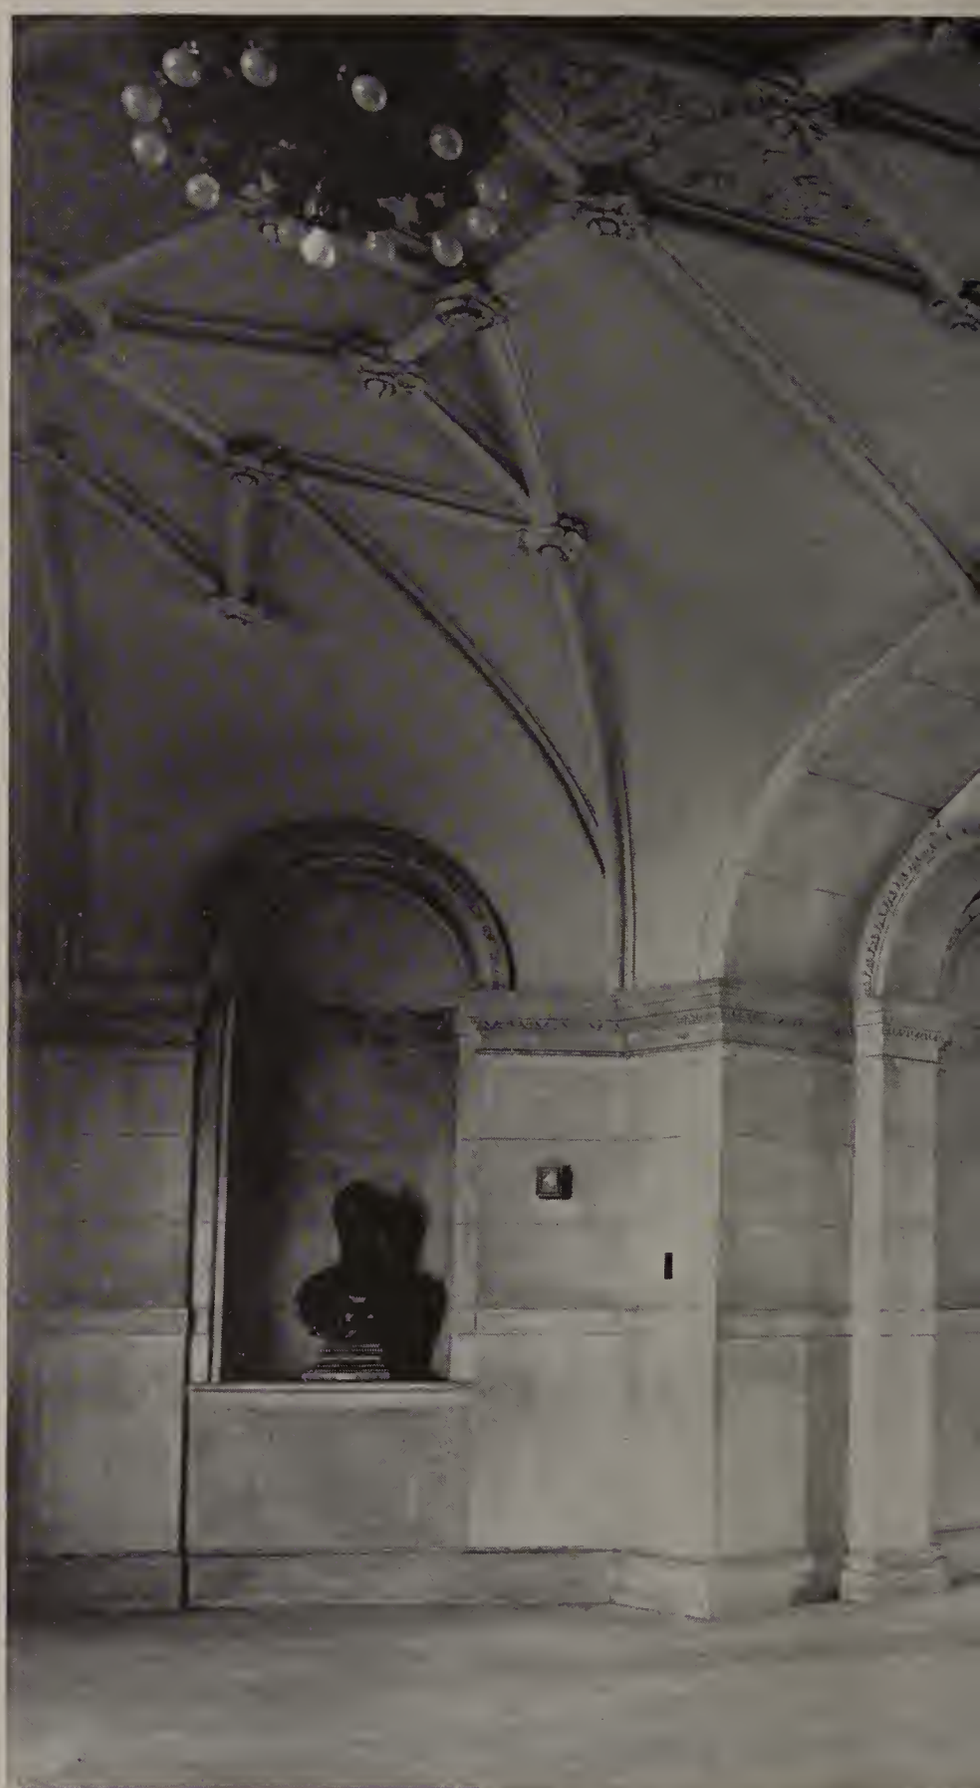

The baseball season had a fine start with high school spirit and support. Coach Clement wasn't so handcuffed as in his first year, and with the teamwork that has been shown in a few of our opening games, the prospects of a good season may easily be realized.

A pitcher needs good backing, and with good teamwork Fairhaven will head the league and remain on top. The early season outlook shows that the boys will make plenty of placements on the "All Bristol" team.

Our team heads all other schools in the number of games played. Fairhaven has the jump on early season preparation. This leads to a strong possibility of improving last year's baseball record.

The East Corridor

Girls' Basketball

The Fairhaven High School girls, who made up the varsity squad, enjoyed an excellent season. Out of the four games that were scheduled with other schools, two were won. The opponents were the Dartmouth and Tabor girls.

Two tournaments were played. The first was an interclass tournament, which was made up of girls from the different classes. The second was an intra-mural team tournament. Both were enthusiastically received.

Girls' Hockey

The girl's hockey team opened its season with a game against Dartmouth. Two other games were played, including one with Tabor and a return game with Dartmouth.

There were also intra-mural teams made up of the girls from the different classes. Miss Helen Cushing, gym instructor for the girls, and Miss Ruth Kussman of the faculty gave their services at the games.

NORTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

Offers young men a broad program of college subjects serving as a foundation for the understanding of modern culture, social relations, and technical achievement. The purpose of this program is to give the student a liberal and cultural education and a vocational competence which fits him to enter some specific type of useful employment.

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

Offers young men a college program with broad and thorough training in the principles of business with specialization in Accounting, Journalism, Banking and Finance, Public Administration, Industrial Administration or Marketing and Advertising. Instruction is through lectures, solution of business problems, class discussions, motion pictures and talks by business men.

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

Provides young men complete college programs in Engineering with professional courses in the fields of Civil, Mechanical (with Diesel, Aeronautical, and Air Conditioning options), Electrical, Chemical, Industrial Engineering, and Engineering Administration. General engineering courses are pursued during the freshman year; thus the student need not make a final decision as to the branch of engineering in which he wishes to specialize until the beginning of the sophomore year.

CO-OPERATIVE PLAN

The Co-operative Plan, which is available to upperclassmen in all courses, provides for a combination of practical industrial experience with classroom instruction. Under this plan the student is able to earn a portion of his school expenses as well as to make business contacts which prove valuable in later years.
